VOICE OF THE NEW NATIONAL FRONT

BRITAIN HEADS FOR COLLAPSE

OLD PARTY SYSTEM, ROTTEN TO THE CORE, MEETS ITS NEMESIS

BRITAIN HEADS FOR COLLAPSE – the collapse we have long predicted. On the surface it is a collapse of the economy: industrial bankruptcy; unemployment; inflation. At root, however, it is a collapse of political will. Britain has the skills and resources to achieve great prosperity; these only need to be organised and exploited by sound political leadership. But we have had no political leadership of any quality for a long time, only a dreary procession of small and inadequate party careerists with an eye to the half-chance but with no comprehension of the real nature of Britain's crisis, let alone the strength of character to adopt the measures necessary to overcome that crisis.

● NATIONAL BANKRUPTCY

Britain is becoming bankrupt. Our great industries are just being allowed to die. Our national resources are being squandered. As a nation, we have lost control over our own destiny.

● MILLIONS OUT OF WORK

Unemployment edges up to 2¼ million. It will probably soon be 3 million. Great numbers of our young people are leaving school, only to drift into soul-destroying idleness.

● ANARCHY

Crime and disorder are on the increase everywhere. Industrial disruption is rife. Mugging and rape are epidemic. Street violence is commonplace. Britain is becoming ungovernable by the old methods.

● RACE RIOTS

The multi-racial society has not worked. Britain's different ethnic groups cannot co-exist. Racial trouble is on the boil wherever White and Black races are in contact. Immigration has proved a disaster but none of the old parties has the courage to reverse it.

What lies at the centre of our national decline is the political system itself – for it is that system that consistently fails to produce leaders of the right calibre or the necessary machinery to get things done. At best, the system breeds mediocrity and cowardice, at worst, it serves vested interest and corruption.

AGENTS OF COLLAPSE

TORIES
Present policies murdering British industry

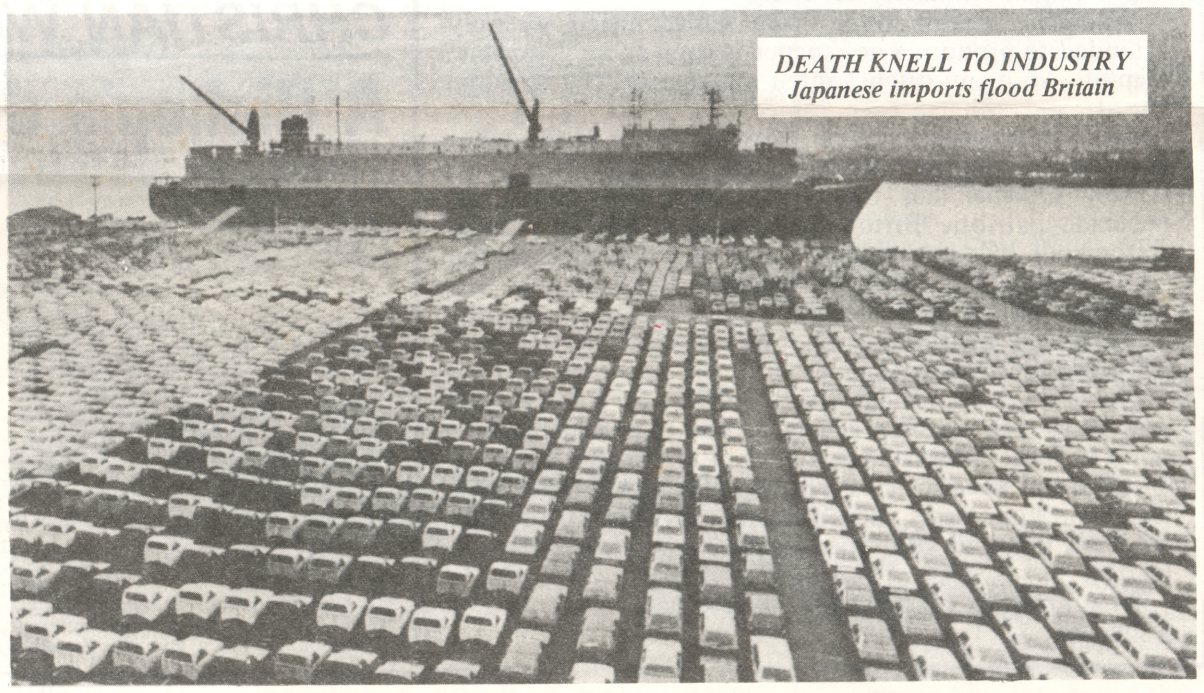
LABOUR
An abysmal record of disaster

LIBERALS
No alternative offered – only the creed of national suicide

Millions of British workers stand idle, and millions more face idleness in the near future, while government cries impotently that it can do little for them in the face of declining markets and monetary shortage. Yet those workers could easily be employed if the Government had a firm policy: it could put them to work producing for a British market now served by Japanese, German and other foreign manufacturers, and to this purpose it could create the money necessary to finance production.

But this Government stands paralysed in the face of such a task. It will not protect the livelihood of the British Worker by stopping the foreign goods invasion because this runs contrary to its outmoded and discredited philosophy of international free trade – and to the dictates of the barons of International Finance to which British Government has made itself subservient. It will not provide the money that industry needs for fear that this will cause inflation – but the reality is that there need be no inflation if that money puts people to work and releases productive forces that will create new national wealth of equal value.

The present Government has produced economic disaster because it is headed by politicians who lack the most elementary grasp of the realities of economic life. In the ranks of the Opposition, these realities are no better understood – as is evidenced by its own performance when in power between 1974 and 1979. And anywhere where there is a glimmer of appreciation of some of these realities there is lacking the resolve to face them and deal with them head-on.



DEATH KNELL TO INDUSTRY
Japanese imports flood Britain

Along with economic failure is a record of failure in every department of the nation's life. The old parties inherited a huge empire from the exertions of our ancestors, and they threw that empire away – the only vestage of it remaining being the hordes of dusky immigrants that they have imported into Britain, throwing into chaos our education, health and social services, creating extra shortages of jobs and housing and introducing needless community strife. Those parties have made this country defenceless against armed attack, both in terms of adequate weapons and the will to resist. They have sown the seeds of Communism and are now reaping the harvest in the form of the militants who are taking over the Labour Party, the unions, the schools and the media.

The system is rotten and is going to collapse, as Rome collapsed out of inner rottenness. We should not fear the collapse but should welcome it. What we must not allow is that the collapse of the system should become the collapse of Britain itself.

THE SYSTEM ITSELF Rotten, corrupt, inefficient, archaic and dying

THE ONLY ALTERNATIVE

THE TOTAL collapse of Britain can now only be prevented if we are prepared to embrace radical change – not just a change of government and party but a change of the whole system; and not only this but a change in many of the very basic values for which British politics have stood.

The first essential is to institute strong government: a government able to transcend sectional interests and unite the whole nation in a crusade for national recovery; a government able to bring order and discipline to the nation's life in a way that has only previously been achieved during wartime; a government prepared to stop playing at politics and properly govern.

Such a government must be democratic in the sense that it operates within a framework of popular consent. At the same time it must be prepared to act ruthlessly against those forces within British society that undermine law and order, national unity and morale.

Such a government must grip and control the economic forces within the nation and direct all their activities towards a single national interest. Private enterprise must be encouraged, but only where it benefits Britain and the British people; our system can have no room for the international capitalist adventurer who in pursuit of a quick profit will put thousands of his own countrymen out of work.

Underlying the policies of government must be a creed of British Nationalism – as opposed to the woolly and flaccid internationalism of today's old parties. For far too long Britain has been a 'patsy' among the nations, due to her leaders' weakness in defence of the national interest. 'Britain First' must be the keynote of all policies at home and abroad.

The New National Front has been created as the party through which these radical changes may be achieved. The New National Front is a development from the National Front, campaigning on the same policies as the NF has fought for for the last decade but with a tighter and more disciplined internal organisation which reflects in its own structure and methods the strong leadership that it advocates for Britain.

This paper will campaign to persuade the British people that at this advanced stage of national crisis the New National Front is the only viable alternative to collapse and chaos.

NEW YEAR–NEW PAPER–NEW FRONTIER!

NEW FRONTIER has been launched to support the policies, reflect the views, and report the activities of the New National Front. It is indeed appropriate that the first appearance of New Frontier should coincide with the start of a New Year, and we sincerely hope that you will find this paper stimulating, informative and interesting, not only during 1981, but for many, many years to come.

Most readers at this opening stage will know that the New National Front has been launched as a movement to fight for the ideals and objectives fought for in the recent past by the National Front but with a more tightly knit and disciplined internal organisation and excluding the undesirable elements which over the last year or so have come to predominate on the National Directorate of the NF. The long-term objective of the New National Front is the eventual reunification of the separate factions into which the NF became divided during 1979 and 1980 but we are convinced that this can only happen under the firm leadership of sound people, upright in their personal character as well as possessing the desired political integrity and ability. The NF National Directorate, with its present homosexual flavour, cannot qualify in this regard.

In these circumstances, the immediate objective of New Frontier is to support the efforts of the New National Front to rally together the divided forces of the old National Front under a leadership that is independent of the NF Directorate, so that a party may once again be built that is worthy of the countless patriots that have so courageously flown the flag of British Nationalism over the years, and upon which the revival and destiny of Great Britain ultimately depends.

When the New National Front was launched, we fully intended to produce a newspaper as soon as we were able. Happily, so many disenchanted members of the National Front, and others, have joined our ranks that it has become necessary for New Frontier to make its debut very much earlier than we had dared to hope.

New Frontier has three main objectives: firstly, to persuade patriotic Britons to join us in our crusade to restore our beloved country to its rightful place in the world; secondly, to inform readers of our policies and ideology; and thirdly, to keep readers in touch with our activities. In addition, we hope that New Frontier will provide our readers with many hours of enjoyable reading.

However, New Frontier will only be as good as you help us to make it. We will rely on you to provide us with news of local events and activities of interest to Nationalists. We will need articles, photographs and cartoons. We also want your views, ideas and criticisms. But most of all we want you and your friends to buy New Frontier and read it!

New Frontier is your paper. Please help us to make it a success.

RACE VIOLENCE BREAKING OUT ALL OVER BRITAIN

News media suppress the facts while police are ordered to go easy on black rioters

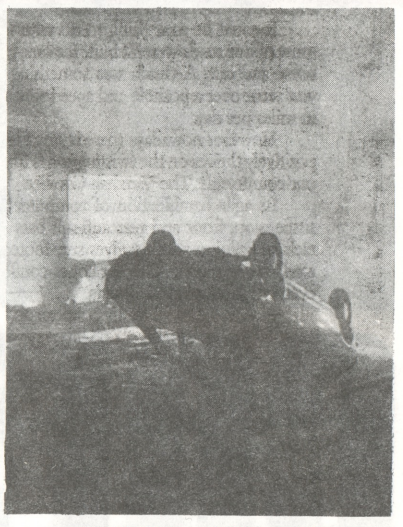
SERIOUS OUTBREAKS of racial trouble are occurring all over Britain, but these are not receiving national publicity nor are the perpetrators being properly dealt with by the strong arm of the law. These facts emerged from a special report that appeared in Spearhead magazine in November.

In the face of the outbreaks, the 'Establishment' has a twofold response. One is to persuade newspaper editors and broadcasters, where it feels necessary, not to report incidents of race trouble or at least to play them down. The other is to instruct police chiefs to go easy on the Blacks who cause the trouble.

We say 'where it feels necessary' because usually it is not necessary; most newspapermen and broadcasters are themselves part of the same 'Establishment' and can be relied upon to do what is required of them without prompting. In the case of instructions to the police, these are not made in a form which would enable them to be put on any official record – for that would be dangerous; they are given implicitly in messages to the police that they should do 'everything possible' to avoid confrontation with racial minority groups. In the official jargon that every police chief understands, 'everything possible' means, in effect, giving priority to the avoidance of confrontation over the requirements of enforcing the law.

As a result, the life and property of law-abiding British people are being put at appalling risk as Black mobs go on the rampage because of inadequate police action in the maintenance of the peace.

This was seen at Bristol in the St. Pauls riot that occurred last April. In that area of the city thousands of crazed Blacks were allowed to run amok, looting and burning for five hours before a proper police presence was established in the area. In November it was the turn of Gloucester to suffer. A group of about 80 Blacks went berserk in the city centre and threatened many shoppers while police officers just stood by and watched. Similar incidents have been reported to us from Wolverhampton, Birmingham, Leicester, Bradford, Manchester, Nottingham, West Bromwich, Sheffield and London, but in all cases there was a mass media cover-up.



BRISTOL: APRIL 1980
Police car burns after being set on fire by raging Blacks

The fact is that the 'Establishment' knows that its experiment in making Britain multi-racial has failed dismally and, in its fright, it is trying to hide the consequences from the British people. We in New Frontier are going to make sure that the British people get to know the real truth about the appalling effects of multi-racialism in our country.

CHRISTIAN WITNESS

A Bishop's double standards on race

And if a stranger lives among you in our land, do not molest him. You must count him as one of your countrymen and love him as yourselves – for you were strangers in Egypt. I am the Lord your God.
– Leviticus Ch. 19

IN HIS Diocesan Newsletter for September 1979, the Bishop of Chichester used the above quotation in an attempt to persuade his flock to accept "multi-racialism". His Lordship would, perhaps, have been better employed preaching a sermon on the desirability of race mixing to the present conquerors of Palestine, who have so ruthlessly subjugated the indigenous Arabs unfortunate enough to live there.

In any case, the word "strangers" in the quotation is rather a careless translation of the Hebrew word ger. The ger were, like the Israelites themselves, descendants of Shem, and were therefore of the same racial stock. Even so, for the ger to be accepted as citizens of Israel they had to conform to the customs and beliefs of their hosts. For example, males had to be circumcised, the Passover had to be observed, and the laws of Israel had to be obeyed. Laws and customs were not altered one iota to suit the convenience of the ger.

Although these requirements would probably be regarded extremely harsh by the Bishop of Chichester, they were mild compared to the treatment meted out to half-breeds and those people who could not prove blood relationship with the Israelites. Such people were regarded as outcastes. They were specifically excluded from privileges granted to citizens and could not hold positions of authority, approach the Tabernacle, or marry Israelites.

How different it is in present-day Britain! Here the authorities, aided and abetted by the clergy, seek to promote "multiracialism" by allowing Sikhs to ride motorcycles without wearing crash helmets, letting Moslems practice polygamy, and permitting Jews and Moslems to kill animals using inhumane methods for which Britons would, quite rightly, end up in court. And these are just a few of the concessions made for non-Christian aliens with the full approval of many of our clergy.

Why, then, do prelates like the Bishop of Chichester expect Christians in Britain to accept race mixing with equanimity when the Bible expressly forbids it? And why do they call for exceptions to be made to our laws for the benefit of aliens who choose to come here, when the Israelites were not allowed to make such concessions to foreigners in biblical times?

Unless some satisfactory answer is forthcoming, it would appear that the Bishop and like-minded clergymen are either woefully ignorant of scriptural doctrine, or they are intent upon doing the Devil's work to destroy their own race. If the Bishop belongs to the first category, he should re-read his Bible; if he belongs to the second, he should publicly declare his apostasy and resign his See.

A bishop should be a follower of Christ, not Antichrist. My Lord of Chichester cannot have it both ways: he should let us know exactly where he stands.

NEWS ROUND-UP

BOAT PEOPLE

THE GOVERNOR of Hong Kong, Sir Murray MacleHose, has urged the Government to allow a substantially increased number of Vietnamese boat people to settle in Britain. This is in addition to the 17,000 boat people whom the Government has already agreed to accept by the end of next year.

BUY BRITISH

SCUNTHORPE shopkeeper, Mrs. Barbara Blanchard, has been threatened with prosecution by the Scunthorpe Community Relations Council for displaying a sign bearing the slogan: "We serve you the good old British way." Mrs. Blanchard was told that the slogan contravened the Race Relations Act. Said Mrs. Blanchard: "I am not going to change the sign."

EXORCISTS VERSUS WITCHES

NGANGAS (witch-doctors) are to be officially incorporated into "Zimbabwe's" national health service with the blessing of Dr. Ushewokunze, the Minister of Health. A spokeswoman of an association of ngangas is reported to have said that only ngangas of proven ability will be accepted, and that Mr. Hardson Chikange, an exorcist acknowledged by many tribal chiefs and headmen for his success in "catching witches", would be employed by the association to get rid of the "witches".

HARASSMENT

THE Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants has accused the Home Office of harassing legally settled immigrants. The Home Office has officially denied the allegations and has issued a statement that it has no intention of introducing "tougher enforcement policies" against illegal immigrants.

FOUR black youths were each jailed for six years for being in possession of petrol bombs at a National Front march in Lewisham. After the trial, Mr. Rudy Narayan of the West Indian Standing Conference, described the sentences as "sadistic and barbarous."

RIOTING RETURNS TO BRISTOL

FIGHTING broke out at Bristol Magistrates' Court recently when 16 people faced charges arising out of the riots by Blacks that took place in the city last April. Some defendants jumped from the dock and started an affray, causing the court to be cleared. Outside the court clashes occurred between coloured demonstrators and the police.

MAN home to New Zealand on holiday from his job in Nigeria tells of a bank robbery where the thief was chased into a blind alley. When the pursuing police got there, the man had disappeared and the only thing left was a goat. Believing the man had used some evil witchcraft to change himself into the goat, they took the poor animal to court, tried it, found it guilty and took it out and shot it. He swears it's true.

EITHER Column 88 or the Underground Nazi Movement are reported to have been responsible for sending a letter bomb to Frank Allaun, the Jewish Labour MP. Representatives of Column 88 have denied they sent the bomb, while police say the UNM is unknown to them.

PLAYING FOR TIME

LIBERIA's Head-of-State, Master-Sergeant Samuel K. Doe, threatened the Liberian national football team with execution if they failed to beat the Gambian side. The result was a draw and the players were reprieved. It is reported that the match was rather tense.

SWEET AND SOUR

TWO Barnstaple shopkeepers have each been fined £1 for selling sugar in pounds instead of kilograms. The prosecution alleged that Britain's entry into the Common Market made it illegal for sugar or salt to be sold in imperial measures.

YOUR LETTERS

New Frontier will regularly provide space to enable readers to express their views on topics of interest to Nationalists. Please keep your letters short and to the point. Requests for anonymity will be respected, but all letters must bear the name, signature and address of the writer.

– Editor

The following letter was received by the New National Front shortly after its formation:–

Sir,–Now that you have taken the very necessary step of setting up the New National Front as part of your courageous campaign to cleanse the National Front of the undesirable elements who have infiltrated it during recent years, may I suggest that the NNF should produce its own newspaper so that we don't have to reoly on the discredited NF leadership for information?

The NNF certainly has my support in all its endeavours. Good luck to you.

COMMON MARKET COMMENT

WE NEED THE E.E.C. LIKE WE NEED ARSENIC

THE fact that the European Commission has mounted its biggest ever public-relations exercise in Britain, intended to tell us how much better off we all are since joining the EEC, is a sure indication of the alarm with which the Eurocrats regard British disenchantment with the Community.

While the Commissioners (Commissars?) probably regard the Labour party threat to take Britain out of Europe as just another vote-catching exercise that can be discarded when convenient, they have become so worried by the Community's widespread unpopularity in Britain that they recently sent a high-level delegation here.

Headed by former Tory MP-turned EEC Commissioner, Christopher Tugendhat (fine old English name that!), the delegation attended a conference for businessmen and local government officials held in Newcastle upon Tyne.

What particularly worries Mr. Tugendhat and his colleagues (apart from the possible loss of their jobs) is the increasingly clamorous demand from British employers and trade union leaders for import controls. Mr. Tugendhat is appalled. As a committed internationalist, he is resolutely opposed to the imposition of either import controls or embargos – measures which could greatly help to rescue Britain's ailing industries as well as minimising our present high rate of unemployment.

Mr. Tugendhat's argument favouring Britain's continued relationship with the EEC reminds me of a speech given by the Director of the European Movement, Ernest Wistrich (or is it Ernst Vistrich?), at a pre-Referendum meeting I attended. In essence, the argument runs that since Britian has insufficient reserves to enable her to become economically independent, she has no alternative but to remain a member of the EEC because it provides us with an outlet for our manufactured goods, besides ensuring us "continuity of supply".

So it is that the pro-Marketeers use their spurious and manifestly untenable economic theories in an effort to persuade us that we must forever remain entangled with the futile Continental imbroglio!

The defeatist attitude of these poltroons puts me in mind of my early anti-Marketeering days when an MP, who was exasperated by my heckling, asked me to explain my alternative to joining the EEC. I replied: "For more than a thousand years our ancestors survived quite successfully without belonging to a squalid little trading cartel the other side of the English Channel and no one seriously asked 'what is the alternative?'. The alternative to taking arsenic is not to take it."

STEEL INDUSTRY IN A MESS

Meanwhile, EEC Industry Commissioner, Viscount Davignon, admits that the European steel industry is "in a mess" – a view strongly supported by Robert Sheaf, British industrial liaison officer for the EEC, who proposes that Europe's steel problems can only be overcome by invoking Article 58 of the Treaty of Paris, which established the European Coal and Steel Community in 1951, and of which Britain was not a signatory.

Christopher Tugendhat

However, since measures taken under the terms of the Treaty would enable the Commission to enforce production quotas, they would simply exacerbate Britain's steel problems and unemployment in the industry. Britain needs import quotas, not production quotas; and any British government worth its salt should unilaterally declare the imposition of a steel import quota or, better still, embargo without delay. But that, I fear, is too much to be hoped for.

As it is, the demise of Britain's once-mighty steel industry makes it abundantly clear just what an act of unparallelled stupidity it was for us to join the EEC in the first place.

One needs no great knowledge of economics to understand that there is little sense in making mutually exclusive trading arrangements with countries whose economies are identical to our own. Rather, we should seek to trade with those countries whose economies complement ours; countries producing the raw materials we cannot ourselves produce, and which, in turn, can provide us with a market for our manufactured goods.

No doubt, economic "experts" who happen to read these columns will accuse me of taking too simplistic a view of the steel problem. "Experts", particularly those known as "Eurocrats", thrive on complex, confusing and unworkable solutions to problems of their own making. In this context it is interesting to record that Mr. Sheaf has estimated that the Commission will have to increase its staff by "about" 60 people if, as he hopes, the ECSC measures are adopted.

Anti-Marketeer

RHODESIA IN RUINS

DESPITE the bright future awaiting "Zimbabwe" that was so confidently predicted by Lords Carrington and Soames before independence, the reality of black government has belied their Lordships' fondest hopes and shattered the dreams of all those who imagined that a black utopia would emerge once the principle of "one man, one vote" was put into practice.

It is not simply a case of saying "we told you so," or being wise after the event; for any intelligent observer could foresee that the outcome of the Rhodesian debacle would inevitably end in tragedy. After all, were not the loudest advocates of a "free Zimbabwe" the very same people who have wrought such havoc in other parts of Africa and elsewhere over the years?

Even so, it is alarming to learn of the extent of violence and chaos into which Rhodesia has rapidly slipped since becoming "Zimbabwe". Already we hear of thousands of pro-Mugabe and pro-Nkomo terrorists fighting each other and killing innocent Whites in the process. Murder, rape, pillage and corruption are on the increase. A Cabinet Minister, Mr. Edgar Tekere, who has been charged with murdering a white farmer, treats the court with contempt. General Walls has been exiled for criticising the terms of the settlement before the granting of independence, and former Prime Minister Ian Smith, is threatened with a similar fate for daring to criticise the Mugabe regime whilst abroad on a lecture tour. Not a happy scene.

Meanwhile, as Whites understandably leave the country in droves, Mr. Mugabe has the effrontery to demand from Britain an even bigger handout than he is already getting. Unlike Mr. Mugabe, the Whites managed to keep the Rhodesian economy ticking over without handouts, and in spite of world hostility, for fourteen long years.

It is a sad reflection on our times to learn that the unctuous Lord Carrington has been nominated a candidate for this year's Nobel Peace Prize. For it is Lord Carrington and his effete colleagues of all parties in Westminster who has ensured that sooner rather than later there will be a blood bath of terrifying proportions in that beautiful, unhappy country that once was Rhodesia.

TALKING POINTS

by FRONTIERSMAN

TORY CONFERENCE PROVOKES LEFT-WING VIOLENCE

It pleased me no end to learn that Tory delegates were harassed and even threatened by the "Right to Work" marchers who invaded their party conference in Brighton. I had always suspected that had the National Front never existed, the left-wing bully boys would turn their attentions and their wrath onto the Tories.

Now that the NF is temporarily eclipsed due to its takeover by the homosexual-dominated Directorate, the hooligans of the Socialist Workers' (?) Party and the so-called "Anti-Nazi League" are having a field day at the Tories' expense. Serves the Tories right! For years they pusillanimously turned a blind eye to the violence used by left-wing demonstrators against members of the NF.

Incidentally, the fracas at Brighton prompts me to ask: should Tory conferences be allowed to take place, since they so evidently provoke violence from the Left? Perhaps, dear Reader, you think I ask that question with my tongue in my cheek; but it is precisely the same question as has been put so often by those who wish to have NF marches banned.

Watching the Brighton demonstration on TV from the security of my armchair, I could not but help noticing that many of those participating were the same crowd who, over the years, assailed us with bricks and other missiles at such places as Red Lion Square, Lewisham, Southall, Leicester and elsewhere. The same may be said about those who attended the recent CND march – indeed, even the posters and placards used had evidently been modified to suit the occasion. One, bearing the slogan "Skoolkids against the Bomb" came adrift during the proceedings and the word "Nazis" became quite visible.

PRESIDENTIAL PAYMASTER?

In their mad scramble for votes, both Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan were frequently photographed in Synagogues and hobnobbing with rich and influential Jews. After his victory, a photograph appeared in the world's press showing Mr. Reagan in earnest conversation with one of America's best-known Jews, the ubiquitous Henry Kissinger. It reminded me of Disraeli's famous saying that "The world is governed by very different personages from what is imagined by those who are not behind the scenes." I am also reminded of an even older adage – "He who pays the piper calls the tune." Was Kissinger giving Reagan his orders I wonder?

LOOKING AFTER ONE'S OWN

Servicemen very often get a raw deal, which they invariably accept with customary good humour. One only has to speak to our lads serving in Northern Ireland, many of whom live in atrocious conditions, to realise just what a benefit to our country they are. All the more shame, then, to learn that successive British governments have, over the years, conspired to deprive former prisoners-of-war of pay owing to them since their imprisonment.

Matters have recently been made worse by the present Government's announcement that "we cannot sustain these claims" on the grounds that documentary proof of the amounts owed is no longer extant. It will not go unnoticed, however, that the Government finds no difficulty in providing massive financial handouts to "Third World" recipients. The Government should put our own deserving ex-servicemen before undeserving aliens.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

The threatened closure of The Times and Sunday Times by Lord Thomson of Fleet has had two predictable results. Firstly, the well-known opportunist, former Labour MP and boss of Pergamon Press, Robert Maxwell (real name Hoch), has emerged from hibernation to announce how he will save both papers. And secondly, numerous voices have been raised deploring the reduction of the number of national newspapers and consequent limitation of readers' choice which, they say, threatens freedom of the press, and hence the very foundations of democracy.

On the latter point I cannot agree. Apart from size, format and style, there is no real difference between the main national newspapers. They all feed us with the same diet of distorted news and Establishment-approved propaganda. Far from being a threat to democracy, the disappearance of The Times may induce readers to buy publications that really do express opinions which differ from those propagated in the Establishment media – publications like Spearhead and New Frontier.

For these reasons it is most important that New Frontier becomes a real success. Hopefully the day will come when it appears on the newsagents as a real alternative to the national dailies. I wish New Frontier every success for the years that lie ahead.

LEAKS & MOLES

The leaking to the Press Association of Defence Ministry documents containing details of the Government's surreptitiously planned defence cuts has quite rightly created a furore that has embarrassed Mrs. Thatcher.

Readers will not need reminding that during recent years Mrs. Thatcher has frequently warned us that unless defence spending is substantially increased, Britain will be unable to defend herself. In addition, the Tory election manifesto clearly stated that "the national interest demands the maintenance of adequate defence forces."

In such circumstances it is treasonable for Cabinet Ministers even to contemplate reducing military expenditure, and it is they rather than the so-called "moles" in Whitehall who should be undergoing investigation by the Special Branch.

RESPECTING THE WAR DEAD

Talking of Remembrance Day, it was a welcome sight to see youngsters paying their respects to our Fallen Heroes at this year's NF ceremony at the Cenotaph, even if the numbers of those who were present were so much smaller than in previous years. But how our Glorious Dead would have turned in their graves had they known that the Master of Ceremonies for the occasion was a notorious and unrepentant homosexual! Homosexuality is abhorred in our Armed Forces and is still, rightly, a court-martial offence.

A YOUNG NATIONALISTS' VENTURE

WORLD CHURCHES SUBSIDISE MURDERS OF WHITES

NEXT TIME you are asked to contribute to the collection in your Church think of these facts. The World Council of Churches last year paid nearly one third of its "Racism Fund" to the Communist private army of Joshua Nkomo.

Nkomo's "Patriotic Front" as it is commonly known is the mob responsible for the massacre of thousands of Black and White Christians in Rhodesia. These included the mass rape and slaughter of 12 White Missionaries and their families which included a 3-week old baby.

They also brutally murdered 42 survivors of a plane crash – the plane had been shot down using a Russian-made missile. The World Council of Churches helped pay for that missile from its $85,000 grant to Nkomo.

Did you help pay for one of the bullets?

On July 15th 1977, a group of terrorists entered a village in the Rushinga area, East of Mt. Darwin. An entire family – 23 men, women, children and babies – were first beaten, and then herded into a hut which was subsequently set on fire. There were no survivors.

NEW NATIONAL FRONT ON THE MARCH

THE NEW NATIONAL FRONT is on the march – in more ways than one. As 1981 dawns, this movement, which was launched in June of last year for the purpose of rallying the splintered fragments of the old party and reconstituting the party on a firm basis, has gathered to its banner about 60 local units. All except a few of these represent the active majority of the local units of the old NF.

The first public march of the New National Front, held in Chorley (Lancs) in November, typified the new spirit and style that characterises the New NF. Not for years has a march taken place under a National Front banner that was so orderly and dignified in the deportment of the marchers. Asked by party Leader John Tyndall beforehand to ignore the provocation of a large red mob lining the route and to march silently and without silly gestures, the marchers did just that. In addition, they were in standard of cleanliness and smartness vastly better than anything that has been seen on a party march for some considerable time.

The numbers on the march were not great – when compared with those present on public demonstrations during the party's peak years of 1976-78. The recent division and defections experienced by the National Front have taken their toll on activists' morale and this will take time to be restored. This, combined with seasonal factors, cut the size of the column down to about 150. Nevertheless, the higher standards achieved in the way of quality and discipline are certain to have reverberations throughout the nationalist movement in Britain and to attract back many of those who have dropped out of marches due to their disgust at the rabble elements that have been noticeable on recent marches held by the faction of the party supporting the Directorate. This will result in the numbers gradually building up again in time. The keynote in the New NF is to aim at quality first and quantity second.

The march, which was held in protest against the unemployment policies of the Tory Government – particularly as they affect Lancashire, attracted wide local press attention and has resulted in many new enquiries.

MANY MORE JOINING

In the first phase of the development of the New National Front, which took place between June and August last year, about a third of the branches and groups of the old party chose to affiliate with it. Of the remainder, many agreed with its objectives for the reform of the party but were hesitant to commit themselves for fear that it may have adopted the wrong tactics and would not succeed. With the coming of the last quarter of the year, however, two things became established. In the first place, the New NF was succeeding, albeit gradually, and was not some overnight phenomenon that would soon fizzle out; secondly, any hopes that the evils in the old NF would be got rid of by the orthodox constitutional means of Directorate elections and the AGM were dashed for good and all. Homosexuality is still alive and well in the party and in fact several resolutions outlawing it that were submitted by the branches to the Directorate for inclusion on the AGM agenda were suppressed.

During the last weeks of 1980 several new branches and groups that avoided committing themselves previously finally made the decision to 'come over' to the New NF, realising that through it, and through it alone, lay any hope of a reunified and reformed party: branches and groups such as Bournemouth, Canterbury, Liverpool, Cheltenham & Gloucester, North Bucks and High Wycombe. We have it on good information that many more are shortly to follow.

1979/80 was the time in which the old National Front collapsed and disintegrated – due not to the onslaught of the political enemy but to weaknesses in its own internal structure which we pointed out long ago and warned the party would bring catastrophe. 1981 is, we firmly believe, going to mark the beginning of a new era in which the party comes back together and revives. Its basic policies were always sound and right; now, harnessed to those policies, we have a strong internal organisation under a tried and proven leadership with real power to strike hard against any tendencies within that threaten to harm the party. With these assets we cannot and will not fail.

Introducing The Young Nationalists

ON DECEMBER the thirteenth 1980 a meeting of Nationalist youths from all over Great Britain was held in London. The meeting was called to discuss the formation of the youth wing of the New National Front – the Young Nationalists.

The YN was formed to organise and recruit young people and to provide an efficient means of control of youth activities. Its age range is 14-25 years inclusive. Formation of a YN unit will be a requirement to be fulfilled by any New NF Branch with five members within this age group.

The Young Nationalists will be run on the principles of leadership, personal control and responsibility at all levels, all Officers will be appointed by the National Officer who will himself be appointed by the NNF Leader.

The group's field of activities will cover sports and social events as well as the usual political diet of demonstrations, meetings and the production and distribution of Party literature. NNF National Activities Organiser Dave Bruce welcomed the new group, "the Young Nationalists will provide the disciplined youth base on which to build for our activities in the future. A strong youth wing guarantees the future of our movement."

AND THE NATIONAL OFFICER

KEVIN RANDALL has been an active supporter of the National Front for nearly seven years, four of them as a member. At the NF AGM in 1977 he seconded the resolution which formed the Young National Front and since that time has held several position in both the YNF and the main Party. Kevin was the first YNF member to be awarded the YNF Merit Award. He has gained a great deal of experience in all aspects of running a Nationalist youth wing and we are sure he will find plenty of scope for its use.

YOUR MONEY OR OUR LIVES

AS YOU will notice from reading this issue of New Frontier the Young Nationalists has recently been formed and I have been appointed its National Officer.

At our meeting mentioned elsewhere on this page I was asked to consider several schemes and to plan numerous activities, all of which were very worthwhile. These included special hikes and camping weekends, football and tennis contests, social evenings, a youth publication and a drum corps. I would like to be in a position where I could allow all of these ideas to be put into action; however this is financially impossible, at least for the foreseeable future.

The Young Nationalists is the only hope British youth have of ensuring a future for our Race and Nation. The sooner we can fully activate the group in as many of these schemes as possible, the sooner it will be able to recruit, train and educate the rest of the youth community. We desperately need your help. My calculations put our immediate needs at around £500 to £800. We have no way of raising this money on our own.

I am appealing to you to help in the long-term fight for our country. We know it is our future and realise it must be our fight – with your help I know we shall win. Please send your donations, large or small, to YN, Box 115, Hove, East Sussex. Thank you.

Kevin Randall

Northern Ireland Sell-out?

IS a Northern Ireland sell-out imminent following Mrs. Thatcher's recent talks in Dublin with Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey? Mrs. Thatcher says not, reiterating the pledge that Northern Ireland will remain in the United Kingdom so long as its inhabitants wish it. Mr. Haughey, on the other hand, states that he is highly satisfied with the talks – something which he should not be if the British Government had given any indication of staying firm on the principle of Northern Ireland's British status.

Mr. Haughey may of course just be vote-catching – he has an election coming up shortly – and may in reality have extracted nothing out of Mrs. Thatcher to justify his claims of the success of the talks from the point of view of the Republic. We may never know.

But he may justly claim some success from the very fact that the British Prime Minister, accompanied by her Foreign Secretary and Chancellor of the Exchequer, went to Dublin to speak to him about Northern Ireland at all.

Northern Ireland problems are a domestic matter for the United Kingdom only, and as such are no business of the Irish Republic. Mrs. Thatcher was totally wrong in consenting to discuss those problems with the Republic's Prime Minister – a wrong that she compounded by going to Dublin to do it.

All of which makes us believe that sell-out is in the air and is the British Government's intention – whatever may or may not have been said at Dublin.

ENFIELD NEW NF PAY TRIBUTE TO WAR DEAD

A VIOLENT mob of about 50 Left-Wing extremists failed in their attempt to stop a service of Remembrance of the Enfield Branch in North London. Wreaths were trampled on by the Reds as they "picketed" the local War memorial.

However, about 40 New National Front supporters watched as a flag escort accompanied a wreath which was laid by ex-serviceman John Smith. After a few words of tribute to the "heroes who died for the future of Great Britain," read by Branch Organiser Kevin Randall, the NNF supporters marched off along the High Road.

"NO QUEERS ON OUR STAGE!!"

LONDON's National Theatre was the scene of the Young Nationalists' very first activity – a protest at the showing there of the pro-queer and anti-British play "The Romans in Britain". About twenty youths lined both sides of the entrance to the Theatre advising possible patrons against supporting the filth on display within. A frantic Theatre Manager threatened the demonstrators with a call for the Police – however this had the opposite effect, giivng the YN a reason for continuing its peaceful picket some fifteen minutes longer than had been planned.

MEANWHILE . . . inside the Theatre, about six young members of the National Front were planning a lightning attack on the play. Fireworks were thrown onto the stage and, although nothing but their prides were hurt, we believe the naked queer 'druids' on stage got the message.

Obviously there is at least one issue on which all Rightist youths agree.
